

Call for Papers

The Emergence of China and India in the Global Economy

4th-6th July 2008

Centre for Economic Performance
London School of Economics

Conference Sponsored by

Centre for Economic Performance (CEP)
Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI)
Centre for Economic Studies (CESifo)
Centre for Economic Policy Research (CEPR)

Organizers

Stephen Redding, John Van Reenen and John Whalley

Keynote Speakers

Chang-Tai Hsieh (Berkeley)
Peter Schott (Yale)

Papers are invited for a 3-day conference on the emergence of China and India in the Global Economy, to be held at the Centre for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics on 4th-6th July 2008. The general themes of the conference are the causes and consequences of the acceleration of economic development in China and India in recent decades, including the implications for other developing and developed countries around the world.

Topics of particular interest include: trade and financial liberalization, growth and inequality; structural change and economic development; institutions and economic performance; enterprise reform; international trade, foreign direct investment and outsourcing; intellectual property rights; trade and innovation; and the restructuring of production in developed countries.

One session will be specifically dedicated to Young Researchers (who received their Phd no more than 8 years ago).

Deadline for Paper Submission: 30th March 2008

Please submit papers electronically as pdf files to Jo Cantlay (j.m.cantlay@lse.ac.uk), indicating China-India Conference in the subject line of the e-mail.

All accommodation for accepted speakers will be covered by the conference and limited funds are available for travel. Please indicate with your submission whether you wish to apply for these funds.